

If one dares not to fulfill thy tasks, their ankles shall be bound with spheres of lead, fifty cubits in breadth. Thereafter shalt they be compelled to run the fifty-kilometer marathon in but two-thousandths of a second. Should they fail, two chances more shall be granted. Thenceforth, they shall be wedded unto Shrek and forced to breed.

Their sticks shall be cut down to but two centimeters, and they shall be left to bleed. Their eyeballs shall taketh the place of their stones, and their stones the place of their eyeballs. Each hair upon their head shall be pluck'd one by one and fed unto him.

Boiling water shall be poured down their throats, and their skin shall be taken. Their ears shall be seized for decoration. Their nasal hairs and bodily hairs shall be fasten'd with scotch tape and ripped off with great speed, that they may know pain.

Water shalt be granted unto them every three hours, yet they may make water but every seven. Should their bladder betray them, even under torture, it shall be loosed in their breeches. Their fingers shall be slowly cleaved open with a pocket blade, and without balm or mercy, he shall be made to witness his finger-bones drawn forth, one by one, the flesh parteth but halfway to allow the extraction.

Their shins shall be marked thrice round with cuts, and the twain middle rings loosed, that they may fall asunder. A length of bone in the lower leg, now bare, shall be sawn off slowly as he looketh on, imagining the pain though perchance he feeleth it not.

His solid leavings shall be stored beneath his feet, should he hang, bound in chains, discomforted. Freezing waters, in bursts, shall be poured upon him, and he shall be touched with iron hot. By this time, his legs below the knee and all fingers shall be gone. All hair, stripped. Only the head and arms remain protruding from the chest.

Yet the arms remain a hindrance; they must be destroyed, thrust into the particle accelerator. Thereafter, he shall bear only stumps. He shall then be tickled at his navel every two minutes, and upon the neck one minute hence the stomach's jest.

His kin shall be captured, and he must gaze upon their cleaving, then consume them, save for that which is too hard to chew. Drops of hot water, at fourscore degrees of Celsius, shall rain upon him for six and thirty hours.

Lastly, his skull shall be opened—mayhap while he yet liveth—and the surgeon, being volunteers plucked from yonder homeless shelter, shall prod his very brain. When all is done, he shall be no more, and his remains shall be cast unto the nuclear power plant, to dissolve with the nuclear waste.